SYDNEY, Today. — The Sydney bus driver who is going to fly to Grafton, northern New South Wales, to drive the group of university students protesting against racial discrimination, said today he was a little anxious about the trip.

Mr Ern Albrecht, of Lugarno, an outer suburb, will replace Mr William Pakenham, who left the anti-segregation tour yesterday.

Mr Pakenham walked out of the tour after racial violence at Moree, northern NSW, on Saturday.

Mr Albrecht said today he was a little nervous about making the trip, but was not particularly worried.

The bus will visit Lismore and Kempsey, returning to Sydney via the Pacific Highway.
